

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1911.

Published every week-day afternoon.
 Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

Rev. Sanford still has plenty of "ginger."

And the Vermont grange did not nominate a man for governor; leastwise, not so far as known.

See the "Shooting Show" Girls of Stokesville." No up-to-date press agent will overlook the splendid possibilities.

Although not a large man physically, State Senator Max L. Powell of Burlington is a host in himself. For latest references, the 1910 Senate.

By the way, we suppose that Gov. Mead is still on the job, there being no word to the contrary. This business of "governor-ing" of Vermont runs automatically when once started.

Says the Concord, N. H., Monitor: "J. A. DeBoer, candidate for governor of Vermont, is making a good start by advocating the direct primary system of nomination. It is what the people want."

Congressman D. J. Foster of the first district, having just purchased a house in Washington, thereby gives warning that he is taking root there. But even if the voters of his district should decree otherwise, Congressman D. J. could probably find a ready market with his successor. But it remains to be said that Congressman Foster is not giving serious cause for them to register such a decree in the near future.

The Vermont newspapers are fairly shouting the Christmas glee—through their advertisements. Not in years, if ever, have the papers so bulged with advertising matter as the issues which have come to hand this week. It is not confined to the daily newspapers, either, the weekly journals having full columns and many being required to run supplementary sheets to accommodate the wants of the merchants. On the whole, this is encouraging as indicating a healthy spirit of activity. Certainly it is progressive for both the newspapers and the advertisers.

Senatorial talk about the three places in Washington county has already brought out so many possible candidates that people are looking ahead to the next census, which is confidently expected to give the county four senators. In that event, it ought to be possible for Barre and Montpelier to have a senator each session, instead of alternating as they do now under the three-senator regime. The importance of each city, coupled with the fact that their collective growth will have made the extra senatorship possible, entitles Barre and Montpelier to such recognition.

GAINING KNOWLEDGE OF FORESTRY.

It is reassuring to see the growth of the forestry idea in the United States to the extent that not only states, but cities and towns, are taking up the sequestration of forest tracts against the time when the timber can be cut scientifically and at a great profit. The progressive forestry thought in Vermont has not worked itself down to that small geographical division, but the state of Vermont is gradually enlarging the scope of the work in a manner which promises to bring wealth to Vermont in due season. Far better than the direct returns from that, however, is the effect which the conservation movement is making on the individual people of Vermont, who more and more are coming to a realization of the benefits to be gained by scientific cutting, rather than indiscriminate slaughter of trees. And, too, the growth of the idea is coming just in time to prevent the denuding of the Vermont hills of their splendid riches. European countries, Germany in particular, have shown us that it is both possible to eat our cake and yet have it, and we are learning the lesson.

Big Auction Sale Held.

Farnham's sixth big combination auction sale, held at Montpelier yesterday, notwithstanding the stormy day and bad traveling, was a marked success. A large crowd was in attendance. Forty horses, two mules, 24 cows, one yoke of oxen, yoke of steers, colts, calves, pigs, poultry, harnesses, sleighs, wagons, robes, blankets, whips, halters, etc., went through the ring and most of the property was disposed of at satisfactory prices, both to owners and purchasers.

These sales are getting to be very popular, a market where people can dispose of property they do not want or have any use for, and a place to purchase what they do want. And every one that has done business with Horace Farnham knows that everything is on the square. These sales will be held monthly. Watch the bills and papers for the next one, which will be held somewhere from the first to the middle of January. C. F. Smith of Barre is the auctioneer and does most of the talking.
